Sir,

Till last century it was an in-built or desired practice to have long rubber mud guards on both wheels of a bike to avoid dust and water from the road to the driver and other commuters behind the bike. In this century the manufacturers as well as fashion- affected youth cut or remove the mud guard and result is that the driver's back is ruined by wet soil/ keechad and commuters behind him are also affected by it. Is this R and D practice and innovation of this century? I had made the same complain about 10 years back.

Please re-think over it.
